

Examples of racial discrimination and bullying against Japanese children in the United States of America collected by Professor Shiro Takahashi of Meisei University

The following are some of the examples of Japanese children being bullied and discriminated by Korean & Chinese counterparts after Comfort Women Statues were erected in the U.S. These incidents clearly suggest that young children are most susceptible to racial hatred promoted by adults no matter how those Korean (& Chinese) adults try to justify erection of such statues by calling them "Peace Statues" as such. The fact is that there was no such noticeable animosity reported before the Comfort Woman Statue movement was promoted by the Anti-Japan Korean groups.

It has been brought to our attention that similar kind of animosity has been observed in Sydney as well. Many Japanese residents stopped shopping at Korean grocery shops due to the change of attitudes shown by Korean shop keepers.

Example 1 Primary Students

Japanese mothers are completely ignored by Chinese & Korean mothers. They flatly ignore even greetings. At a community party they served cold rice only to Japanese families. During lunch time at school Japanese students were bullied and ostracized by being told "Japanese lunch boxes are smelly and Japanese are smelly."

Example 2 Primary School

At school a Japanese student was told by his Korean classmate that he did not want to play with Japanese because his parents told him that Japanese were bad race. The Japanese student then asked his mother if he should hide his nationality.

Example 3 Junior High School

At school Japanese students were told by Korean students unknown to them that Japan was a nasty country.

Example 4 Primary School

A Japanese student was suddenly told by a close Korean friend "Stupid Japanese are trying to steal Korean island." The Japanese student and his parent were totally shocked.

Example 5 High School

A Korean student suddenly assaulted a Japanese student shouting "I hate Japs."

Example 6 Primary School

Korean students repeatedly spat at Japanese students even by chasing them escaping. Korean students constantly bullied Japanese students by saying anything like "Korea defeated Japan in a football match and Japan copied Korean cartoon character etc.etc."

Example 7 High School

Korean students put posters stating the Takeshima Island (under the territorial dispute) belonged to Korea all over the school. Japanese students were intensely intimidated teachers did nothing with it.

Example 8 (Junior High School)

A Korean female and a Korean male student performed a play at a public school in front of all the students of the school. The play was featuring atrocities committed by the Japanese Imperial Army as a true story. After the play Japanese students who were minority at the school were blamed by being told "Ashamed of yourself being Japanese. Japanese are cruel." They were completely intimidated and humiliated.
